

IB ATL Skill Categories

Communication

Effective communication requires being able to express ideas and views clearly, confidently and concisely, tailoring content and style to the audience.

Thinking:

Developing thinking skills is a key feature of the constructivist approach that so heavily influences all IB programmes.

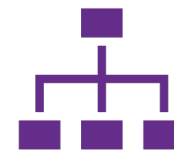

Research:

Research skills are also at the heart of inquiry-based pedagogy, which heavily influences all IB programmes.

Social:

Learning is a fundamentally active social process, and collaboration is a crucial way of constructing understanding and making meaning.

Self-

Management:

By taking responsibility for our own behavior and well-being, we can become more efficient and effective.